

River Metals Recycling participated in ‘Cans for a Cause’ to help support The Healing Place

From March 25 through March 31, 2017 River Metals Recycling (RMR) - - Louisville’s largest scrap metal recycler - - raised funds for donations to The Healing Place. Recyclers took their aluminum cans or can tabs to River Metals Recycling’s 2045 River Road location and designated that the value go to The Healing Place. RMR transferred that amount and also contributed an extra 50 cents for each dollar donated.

The Healing Place offers programs for both men and women struggling with addiction. Now a nationally-recognized recovery program for men and women, The Healing Place was founded in 1989 as a homeless shelter and medical clinic for men. They provide food, clothing, and shelter at no cost to more than 600 clients daily seeking help for their addictions.

Tim Denham, who spearheaded the ‘Cans for a Cause’ project for RMR, said the company’s culture and philosophy revolves around being good neighbors in and giving back to the communities in which RMR does business. “At River Metals Recycling, it is our way of “paying it forward” for an organization that does so much for community members. We are honored to partner with The Healing Place to raise money and help support their cause.”

About River Metals Recycling

RMR buys common household ferrous and nonferrous scrap metal items like appliances, gutters, sheet metal, automobiles, aluminum cans and other aluminum, copper and brass products. RMR is open Monday – Friday from 7:30 am – 4 pm and on Saturdays from 7:30 am – noon. RMR is the largest full-service scrap metals recycler in Louisville and is wholly owned by The David J. Joseph Company (DJJ). DJJ is a subsidiary of Nucor Corporation, the largest purchaser of ferrous scrap in North America.

For more

THE HEALING PLACE

information contact:

Ann E. DeWert
Director of
The David J. Joseph Company
(513) 419-6014
Ann.DeWert@DJJ.com

1020 West Market St.
Louisville, KY 40202

Corporate Services